Much old furniture has been obtained for the play to fit into this period.

"Every effort by the use of costumes, setting, music and other effects are being used to give an atmosphere of the early '60's," said Miss Alma Lucas, director of the play, today. Miss Laura Hawkins is also helping direct the play. Many elaborate, colonial costumes will be used in the play. Several Maryville families have given old-fashioned gowns that have been treasured since the Civil War days, for use in the play. Some will be wedding gowns used by early residents here. There will be some shawls used that are over a hundred years old.

Several romances run throughout the play. Most important of these are: The romance of Mag and John Brook, Joe and Professor Bhaer; that of Amy and Laurie, and the romance of the two old sweethearts, Mr. and Mrs. March. NINTH ANNIVERSARY SALE BEGAN TODAY

HAINES STORE OBSERVES ANNUAL CUSTOM

WILL LAST ONE WEEK

Eleven Extra Clerks and a Cashier Employed For the Sale—Large Crowd At Opening

The ninth annual anniversary sale of the Harvey L. Haines store started at 9 o'clock this morning. More than an hour before the sale started a crowd began to gather in front of the store and by 9 o'clock people were crowded in the street.

Mr. Haines said today that indications pointed to the largest anniversary sale in the history of the store. It has been the custom of the institution for the past nine years to hold an anniversary sale each year without profit to express appreciation for the manner in which the people of Maryville and vacinity have patronized it.

In addition to the regular sixteen clerks which are employed in the store the year round there are eleven extras. Also this year Mr. Haines is using Murray Welling of the Farmers Trust Co. as cashier.

Since the Haines store opened ten years ago there have been two additions. In the second year the store was run back to the alley and last year a ready to wear department was installed on the upper floor.

According to Mr. Haines his store is now stocked with enough goods to fill a place three times its size. The only way that the stock is handled is by proper management and because it is kept in such good condition on the shelves all of the time.

The Haines store is one of the few which observes every legal holiday. Whether the other stores do it or not Mr. Haines always closes on holidays.

The sale will end a week from tonight.

MRS. ANNA FOX, 65 ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

SLASHES THROAT THIS MORNING WITH A RAZOR

WORRIED OVER HEALTH

Windpipe Cut In Two Places But Woman Remains Conscious—Chances For Recovery

Mrs. Anna Fox, 65, living ten miles southwest of Maryville, is in a critical condition this afternoon following her attempt, about 8 o'clock this morning, to take her life by slashing her throat with a razor. Despondency and fear of recurrence of an attack of mental disease was given as the cause for her act.

Dr. Eldon Finley of Graham was called and took nine stitches in her neck and nine in her windpipe. The gash cut the windpipe in two places almost severing it and barely missed the jugular vein. The chances for her recovery are said to be favorable unless complications develop.

Mrs. Fox has been in ill health for some time. Four years ago she suffered a mental attack and was in an Omaha sanitarium for some time. She stepped out upon the back porch of the Fox home and slashed her throat with a razor. Her son, Everett Fox, and daughter Minnie, with whom she lived, and Jay Mutz, who came over to help sheer sheep, discovered her at once and called a physician. They took her in the house and rendered first aid to the cut. She was conscious all of the time and said that she feared a recurrence of her former mental illness. She also seemed to worry about the trouble she had caused by her illness. At different times in recent weeks her mind has not been entirely clear. Her husband died about five years ago.

PRESBYTERIANS REBUKE BRYAN

COMMONER DEFEATED IN RACE FOR MODERATOR.

A FIGHT ON EVOLUTION

After His Defeat He Is Ignored for Vice-Moderator—New Head Is a Liberal.

Indianapolis, May 19.—Liberals, led by the new moderator, Dr. Charles F. Wishart, and Conservatives, headed by William Jennings Bryan, defeated candidate for the highest office of the Presbyterian Church, momentarily were expected to come to grips today in the 135th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of America.

After failing to award Mr. Bryan the customary honor of naming him vice-moderator, and declining to give him an appointment as chairman of the powerful committee of bills and overtures, Dr. Wishart took up his cudgel in a defense of evolution and science, which he said, might be made a source of strength to the Christian faith.

Bryan, on the other hand, waited for the proper opportunity to make one of his lifetime appeals to have the Presbyterian Church turn its back on the "brute hypothesis" of man's origin, and go down the line for 'old time religion.'"

The flare-up began when Dr. Wishart offered Bryan the chairmanship of the committee on home missions, following his defeat for the moderatorship, which the Commoner refused.

Hopkins Journal

A few weeks ago, a letter in the Journal claimed Mrs. Martha Nixon, who is 89, to be the oldest lady in Hopkins but such is not the case as Mrs. Chas. Bonar celebrated her 90th birthday the 28th of last January and is still alive and active for one of her years. If there are others older than Mrs. Bonar, willing to admit their age, we will be glad to hear from them.

Mrs. J. E. Blair from Honolulu, T. H., and Mrs. C. H. Maranville from Dallas, Tex., are in Hopkins at the bedside of Mrs. Maranville's sister, Miss Ruth Reeder. The husband of Mrs. Blair is a captain and the husband of Mrs. Maranville a major in the regular army.

The male quartet from the State Teachers College put on the last number of the high school lyceum course at the Methodist church last Monday night, making a big hit, the boys giving a better program than many put on by regular chautauqua people. Earl Miller, of this city is a member of the quartet.

George Kegin Jr., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kegin died May 15 after an illness of several weeks duration. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Christian church, conducted by Rev. E. C. Wright, pastor of the Methodist Church, and burial took place in the Hopkins cemetery. What of America?

Shall This Government Live or Die?

Though a wide ocean separates the United States from Europe, yet there are various considerations that warn us against an excess of confidence or security.—Alexander Hamilton, The Federalist, No. XXIV.

XXXVI.

Adjusting the Balance Between State and Nation

We now have to consider some of the more important clauses of the Constitution over which political contests have arisen, and whose interpretation by the supreme court has developed and extended the federal power as we know it today.

The clause in the Constitution on which parties early divided was that giving congress the power "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution" its express powers.

Here was a power almost limitless, and its future applications could not have been forseen even by the most ardent advocates of the doctrine of implied powers. For example, congress, under another clause, article I, section 8, had specific authority to regulate commerce among the states. There were no railroads when the Constitution was written, but when they came congress was able to regulate them, because the railroads were engaged in commerce among the states, and congress could do anything "necessary and proper" to the carrying out of the commerce clause.

The commerce clause itself is one of the great nationalist principles of the Constitution. It wiped out the tariffs and other commercial restrictions the states had imposed under the Articles of Confederation, and gave the federal government a long arm in maintaining equality among them. That commerce should be free among the states was a first essential to nationality, and without this power to keep it free the federal government would have been helpless before the rivalries of the states.

For example, New York tried to give Robert Fulton a monopoly for the operation of steam vessels on the waters of that state, and under this grant Fulton's heirs tried to exclude other steam vessels from operating between New York and New Jersey. The supreme court held the New York grant was invalid as conflicting with the power of congress to regulate commerce among the states.

That court has held that commerce "compreehnds traffic, trade, navigation, communication, the transit of persons and the transmission of messages by telegraph—indeed, every species of commercial intercourse." To this commerce clause we owe a mass of important legislation designed to "promote the general welfare" by protecting the public from manifest evils, such as the shipment of impure foods and the distribution of lottery tickets. The anti-trust laws also were enacted under this clause, and every article of merchandise that goes into interstate commerce is thus brought under the regulation of congress; and it can readily be seen what an immense power this clause confers on the government and to what extent the public's protection is involved in it.

The express powers of congress are enumerated in the Constitution—there are eighteen of them. The first of the enumerated powers is the power to lay and collect taxes, but the same clause that confers this power specifies the uses to which the revenue may be put. There are three only—to pay the nation's debts, to defend it, and to provide for its general welfare.

On the point of what constitutes the general welfare, the political parties again divided and remain divided to this day. The strict constructionists in congress voted steadily against the appropriation of money to improve rivers and harbors and to build roads. They held these were not national functions, but belonged to the states. The other party took the view that to facilitate commerce and communication among the states was to promote the general welfare. The broader view has latterly prevailed, but at first the use of national revenue for international improvements was strongly opposed. A bill for the great national highway, known as the Cumberland Road, failed of President Monroe's approval. President Jackson vetoed all international improvement bills that came to him, and declared that the spending of public money for "local advantages" was unconstitutional and a great evil.

Although highways and waterways then were the only means of binding the expanding nation together in those bonds of communication essential to nationality, these strict constructionists could not see how the public welfare was concerned in their development.

The Constitution gives congress the power to declare war and to raise and support armies, but the fear of military establishments which the founders inherited from their British ancestors caused them to limit strictly the time for which a narmy could be provided for. The limit is two years, which is the life of a congress. Thus no congress can bind a future one to any military policy, and the people have a chance at every election to say what that policy shall be. And the President, although he is commander-in-chief of the army, is powerless to maintain one. This balancing of powers, and the limitation placed on military appropriations, was conceived to check the evils that in England, had been produced by contests for the control, by king and parliament of the military army.

Congress also has power to organize, arm and discipline the militia and to call these forces into the service of the nation, but the power to appoint militia officers was reserved to the states. This reservation is another evidence of the fear that eighteenth century statesmen had of the military power. The states wanted to keep the militia in their own hands, and they felt that as long as they had the appointment of its officers it could not be used to destroy local government.

Experience has proved this reservation of a part of the military power to the states to have been a great mistake. It was a natural one in view of the fears then existing, but those fears, we now know, were groundless; while the harm wrought upon our national defense has continued. The system operated to deprive the nation's military establishment of uniformity. It produced a distinct class of officers differing in training and experience from those in the regular establishment, and has had a bad tendency to cause the state forces to regard themselves as apart from those of the nation. The states, moreover, always have neglected their militia, and when called into the national service these forces have, by reason of their military unpreparedness, been found ill adapted to prompt and satisfactory welding with the national force.

The militia, in theory the popular arm, always has been the weak link in our defensive system. Dual civil government we have made to work. A dual military system is against all military precept and experience and never has been made to work.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health.

Tragic School Fire Claims 77th Victim

Sorrow Reigns in Community Today—Hundreds Visit Freshly Made Mounds in Churchyard.

Camden, S. C., May 19—This grief stricken community bowed still lower today as dawn brought the announcement of the death of Thomas Humphrey, the seventy-seventh fatality of Camden's schoolhouse disaster Thursday night. Humphrey was the assistant cashier of the Bank of Camden. He gave his life in a vain attempt to same his mother from the burning structure. His aged father also lost his life in the flames.

Those who are in a hospital here, suffering from burns and broken bones in their leap from the second-story window of the flimsy school house, are reported to be out of danger today.

There are no smiles in this little community today. Crepe is hanging on scores of doors, and nothing is heard on the streets except the tragic details of the horrid night in the schoolhouse. Some told of persons who made brave attempts to save the lives of others only to lose their own.

Hundreds have visited the freshly-made mounds in the churchyard, which cover more than three-score of bodies burned beyond recognition.

WRITE-UP OF C. D. BELLOWS

ARTICLE IN THE ST. JOSEPH NEWS-PRESS YESTERDAY

PROMINENT BREEDER

Larger Portion of 808-Acre Nodaway County Ranch Is Devoted To Grazing—Captured Many Awards

The following write-up of Charles D. Bellows is taken from the St. Joseph News-Press:

C. D. Bellows, recently elected president of the American Royal Live Stock Show, has been for years a partner in Bellows Brothers, who conduct a famous Shorthorn breeding establishment in Nodaway County. The Bellows Brothers' firm began its work more than twenty years ago, with George P. Bellows and C. D. Bellows as members. In 1913, George P. Bellows was killed in an automobile accident, and his son, Harold Bellows, sold the land and cattle of the deceased to C. D. Bellows and sons, Dale E. Bellows and Fred D. Bellows. Fayette Bellows, a brother of C. D. Bellows, is also a member of the firm.

The Bellows Brothers operate several farms with a total acreage of 808 acres. Parkdale Farm, which adjoins the city of Maryville, is the home of Dale Bellows. The Westlawn Farms, which number three, are superintended by Fred D. Bellows. Another unnamed farm is under the superintendency of Fayette Bellows. This farm of 160 acres is known as the old Curfman farm.

The larger portion of the farm lands, probably about 500 acres, is used for grazing. Enough corn is also grown to fill several silos for winter feeding. A considerable amount of wheat and oats is harvested to provide winter straw for bedding in the cattle barns.

Established in 1876.

Bellows Brothers have been breeding the best of Shorthorn cattle for many years. Their prize winning herd is now in the third generation of the Bellows family, Frank Bellows, father of C. D. Bellows, having established the herd in 1876. This same herd, now headed by Village Supreme, won first at the American Livestock Show at Kansas City in 1917, and also at the International Livestock Show in Chicago the same year. The herd also won all prizes for aged herd, young herd and calf herd at the Iowa State Fair that year. Village Supreme, which is still in use in the herd, was the undefeated grand champion bull at the International Show in Chicago. These are only a few of the honors won by this firm at the numerous shows where they have competed.

Annual sales of cattle have been held on the Bellows' farms for more than twenty years. The first sale was in 1900, when fifty head of cattle were sold at an average of $202. The highest average was reached in 1919 when seventy-three head were auctioned off at a total of $157,250 or an average of $2,180. In the twenty sales that have been held, 1,058 head of cattle have sold at an average of $731.20 per head. The sales are usually held in June of each year. The highest priced bull calf ever sold by the Bellows Brothers brought $15,600.

"On account of lower prices prevailing, no sale will be held this year," C. D. Bellows told The News-Press correspondent in an interview. "We will let the herd increase in numbers, and not have another sale until the financial situation improves. We have about 250 head of cattle on the different farms at the present time."

Cattle to South America.

Several shipment of cattle have been made to the Argentine republic, Brazil and Uruguay. Frequently people from the South American countries visit the Bellows' farms to make a study of the herds and the methods used by this Nodaway County establishment.

When asked about the success of the herd, Mr. Bellows said: "We are making constant efforts to improve the standard of our cattle. We know that if we can breed them good enough, we can continue to sell them even in times of depression."

C. D. Bellows is fifty-eight years old. He was born at Urbana, Ill., but has been a resident of Nodaway County since he was a year old. For many years he has been associated in bank work. He was a member of the firm of Gillam, Bellows and Pierce Loan Company for several years, and was connected with the farm loan department. He is at present vice-president of the Farmers Trust Company of Maryville, which was organized in 1913. He was also connected with the Maryville National Bank, which existed before the Farmers Trust Company was organized. He served one year as a member of the board of directors of the Nodaway County Farm Bureau. He is a member of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce and is always behind every progressive movement for the betterment of city, county, state and nation. For thirteen years he has been a member of the Missouri state board of agriculture, and for a corresponding length of time he has served as a director of the Missouri state fair. Since the death of Ab Dingle of Moberly, president of the fair board, a few months ago, Bellows has been acting president. He is a Republican in politics.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Bellows reside in Maryville. They have one daughter, Mrs. W. N. Deatherage of Maryville, and one other son, Charles Bellows, who will graduate from the University of Wisconsin this spring.

Dean Boyles Bitten by Mad Dog Monday

(Barnard Bulletin).

A mad dog bit Dean Boyles, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Boyles, Monday morning at 11 o'clock, making two bites and leaving a number of teeth prints on his body and wrist. The boy was rushed to Savannah where two madstones were applied. These stones clung for five hours. Dean came to the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Rachael Adams, in Barnard and will take the Pasteur treatments to be doubly sured of a cure from the bites.

Boyles and family were visiting at the home of Milt Boyles and had gone to see the melon patch when they saw the strange dog near the river. When the dog saw the boys, it rushed toward them and bit Dean in the lower part of the bowels. Several teeth prints were made there. A second bite was made on the wrist where four marks were made by the dog. Help was called for and the men folks came with guns and killed the dog. Nearly all other dogs in the country were also killed as a precaution. It is though that no other dogs now alive or no stock were attacked by the mad animal.

Dean is now at his grandmother's home and is feeling just as good and happy as ever. There seem to be no bad effects from the attack on the boy at this time. As soon as the medicine comes, the Pasteur treatments will be given.
